The State of the Oregon Question—Peace or War.
The President has taken another step affecting the great issues of peace or war—a step of the deepest importance to the whole country and the civilized world. The Message, which was delivered yesterday in the Senate, in reply to Mr. Dayton's resolutions of enquiry, has been made the subject of deep and earnest conversation since. That Message simply calls for an augmentation in the army and navy, by way of preparing the country for any disastrous contingency that may take place in the relations between the United States and England in Europe, and the United States and Mexico in America. A slight debate took place on the introduction of this message, but Senators seemed to be afraid of entering upon the subject—it is so fraught with momentous conse-

are engaged in a fully rated race for the summer. This season, however, the President has been able to call upon his Agents and Assistants connected with this concern, and to assure the thousands of liberal patrons who have rendered him such hearty support, that the Government is making energetic and unswerving efforts to be enabled to render the desired performances of the Ak and Sages the most gorgeous, and the most brilliant, and the most judicious, and the most graceful management of all.

The conclusive spectacle of this wonderful season, is the Grand Festival of the Great Spirit, The Great Spirit, Drury Lane authorities, produced with magnificence of Oriental Splendor.

This was discredited by the newspaper organ of the Government; and as the evidence in favor of it was considered by the military division of the War Department, the military party now, however, believe the Message of Mr. Polk, calling on the country to prepare for any contingency in our foreign relations, to be a disclosure on the part of the President of all delegated authority, such as had been distributed by Mr. Haywood in relation to the promulgation of the views of the Executive on the point referred to. All the ultra men—Allen, Cass and others—now claim the President on the inside of the House. It will be seen, therefore, that from the confusion and dissension which have been drawn during the last few months, on the action of parties and of the declarations of the President and his various friends, that the condition of the Oregon question is just, as unsettled as ever, and that there can still be no determining whether in war or in peace—how soon, or how long.

In the meantime I will endeavor to state, as fairly and correctly as possible, what are the prospects of the proposition of this government that similar to England, and that it be a condition of the promise. It is believed by many that such a letter has been written by Mr. Buchanan to Mr. McLane, and that Mr. McLane will make inquiry, so as to ascertain the views and purposes of England—that — shall have been written to Mr. McLane the first of April. In addition to this, it is, also, well known here that Mr. Pakenham has written to his own government, by the same steamer, letters of the strongest character, representing the necessity of coming to a compromise with the United States, and negotiation, as soon as possible; otherwise, the question in this country must slip from their hands, and become an element in the popular elections here, which will ultimately preclude all negotiation, and eventually produce a civil war, and, as it is declared, in the most feeling manner, "that he would sooner lay down his life than that two such countries as England and the United States should go to war on such a question." Both these movements, one on the part of our government, and the other on the part of the British Minister, concur in representing the importance of this question to the British government. It is believed that with the try, they will come to an immediate determination is all conjecture. It is supposed, however, that it will comprehend the basis of the 40th parallel, with certain water rights, and the Hudson Bay Company, to a limited time, and also in giving up all Vancouver's Island to England. Such a proposition, if it come back of making it the basis of a treaty. If the President should frame it, he must do so in order to make it man, and shape it so as to make it acceptable to that body.

This, I believe, constitutes the whole plan of negotiation which has been projected and set on foot by the "conservative" Senators, and on which they rely to escape from the alternative of war, that may happen upon the unconditional claim for the whole of the territory up to 54° 40'.

On the other hand, the ultra-Senators—or 54-40—doubt the accuracy of this statement, and will not credit the assertion that Mr. Buchanan has written any letter of enquiry, and as has been ascribed to his orator, and the President will make any treaty, if he is so directed to do so by the resolution of the Senate.
They persist in the belief that the President is directed to do so by the order of the forty-two parallel, the withdrawal of the troops, and the cessation of hostilities, without utter and irremediable disgrace, consent to any such arrangement. They are afraid, however, there is some ulterior object at work in this new enquiry—such as to give the President this formal step, in his message of yesterday—while, at the same time, he and his government may be in the midst of an informal negotiation with the ultra Sens.

It will be seen from this history of affairs—and I have given facts, nearly as I have collected them—that the present state of the Oregon question—the
